George Heimler's practice encompasses all areas of crime, employment and professional disciplinary hearings, both defence and prosecution.

George has a successful track record relating to the defence of large-scale importation of drugs, and large-scale bank fraud cases. In terms of prosecution, he is experienced across a wide range of charges, including internet pornography, sexual offences, particularly historical allegations, serious violence and dishonesty, including attempted murder, and public violence, including football violence cases.

He has extensive experience of PII issues, drug offences, including confiscation proceedings, money-laundering, corruption and abuse of public office, and offences involving public justice such as perverting justice and making false statements.

Before coming to the Bar, George worked in the banking and insurance industries, and has familiarity with internal procedures of such organisations to recognise and combat fraud
